Major Profile: In the admission decision for this and every major, a wide range of factors are taken into consideration. The profile should not be used to overstate the importance of grades in the admission decision for academic majors but it may offer some guidance as you plan for transfer.

Department Admission Information

This major is capacity-constrained. Completion of prerequisites does not guarantee admission.

Admission is based on the following: GPA (minimum UW GPA of 2.5 required), with emphasis on the courses required for admission and for completion of major requirements; personal statement representing the student's interest in and commitment to becoming a LSJ major; other evidence of a commitment to the study of society, justice, and law.

Admitted applicants often show evidence of success in social science courses. See the department webpage for a list of recommended social science courses.

Students may apply during autumn, winter and spring quarters. The application deadline is the second Friday of the quarter; students are notified of admissions decisions by the sixth week of the quarter in which they apply.

Visit the general catalog for more information on this major:

- With few exceptions, LSJ specific prerequisites are completed at the UW after admission to the University and before admission to the major.
- Most transfer students complete major prerequisites in the first or second quarter at UW and then apply to the major in the following quarter.
- Evidence of writing skills, particularly in the social sciences, is encouraged.

2. General Education & Basic Skills Requirements for the College of Arts and Sciences

This major is in the College of Arts and Sciences, and these are requirements for graduation from that college. You'll find that many of them overlap with prerequisites for the major and requirements for an associate degree. However, completion of the associate degree does not in itself guarantee completion of UW general education or basic skills requirements so it is in your best interest to work these into your schedule before you transfer. More info:
